THE following Biographies are selected from the Encyclopædia Britannica. It was intended to publish the contributions of Lord Macaulay in a separate volume when the work was completed ; but as the lamented and unexpected death of the noble author cuts off the possibility of any further contributions, it has been considered advisable to publish them at once. It is to be regretted that they have not been again revised by the author as he intended, before they appeared in a separate volume ; but as they were carefully corrected by him when passing through the press for the Encyclopædia, there is ground for believing that they would have required little alteration. When these articles were written for the Encyclopædia
