Aliev Sh.M. Theoretical and legal analysis of terms "war" and "armed conflict" // Representative Power—Century 21. 2017. — № 2-3, pp. 15-18.

Aliev Sh.M. — Candidate Department of International Law Faculty of Law Moscow State University, Deputy Head of the Department of Legal Support of the Ministry of Agriculture of the Russian Federation.

Abstract. Any war is an international armed conflict, characterized by the presence of armed clashes between two or more states, but not every international armed conflict is seen as a war. Despite the gradual replacement of the term "war" with the term of "armed conflict", the possibility of declaring the state of war legally exists. The current international law allows us to assert that the term "armed conflict" is broader than the concept of war, since it includes a much larger number of cases of use of armed force. The present article is devoted to the above terms.

Key words: state of war, declaration of the state of war, legal consequences of declaring war, armed conflict, International Law Commission report, International Law Association report.
