

ELEMENTS OF CRITICISM.

Ä

ELEMENTS

OF CRITICISM.

---

BY

HENRY HOME, LORD KAMES,

A JUDGE OF THE COURT OF SESSION IN SCOTLAND, &c. &c. &c.

---

COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME.

---

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR G. COWIE AND CO., POULTRY; BAYNES AND SON, PATERNOSTER ROW; W. MASON, PICKETT STREET;
R. BAYNES, PATERNOSTER ROW; J. CUMMING, M. KEENE,
AND R. M. TIMS, DUBLIN; AND H. S. BAYNES, EDINBURGH.

1824.

Ä

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
INTRODUCTION . . . . .	9
Chap.
1. Perceptions and Ideas in a train . . . . .	17
2. Emotions and Passions . . . . .	24
Part.
1. Causes unfolded of the Emotions and Passions:
Sect.
1. Difference between Emotion and Passsion.— Causes that are the most common and the most general.—Passion considered as pro- ductive of Action . . . . .	25
2. Power of Sounds to raise Emotions and Passions . . . . .	32
3. Causes of the Emotions of Joy and Sorrow	34
4. Sympathetic Emotion of Virtue and its cause	36
5. In many instances one Emotion is produc- tive of another.—The same of Passions . .	38
6. Causes of the Passions of Fear and Anger	44
7. Emotions caused by Fiction . . . . .	47
2. Emotions and Passions as pleasant and painful, agreeable and disagreeable.—Modification of these Qualities . . . . .	55
3. Interrupted Existence of Emotions and Passions. —Their Growth and Decay . . . . .	59
4. Coexistent Emotions and Passions . . . . .	63
5. Influence of Passion with respect to our Percep- tions, Opinions, and Belief . . . . .	76
Appendix. Methods that Nature hath afforded for computing Time and Space . . . . .	82
6. Resemblance of Emotions to their Causes . . .	87
7. Final Causes of the more frequent Emotions and Passions . . . . .	89
3. Beauty . . . . .	95
4. Grandeur and Sublimity . . . . .	101
5. Motion and Force . . . . .	118
6. Novelty, and the unexpected appearance of Objects	122
7. Risible Objects . . . . .	127
8. Resemblance and Dissimilitude . . . . .	130
9. Uniformity and Variety . . . . .	141
Appendix. Concerning the Works of Nature, chiefly with respect to Uniformity and Variety . . .	150