

“Great Writers.”

EDITED BY

ERIC S. ROBERTSON, M.A.,
PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH LITERATURE AND PHILOSOPHY IN THE UNIVERSITY OF THE PUNJAB, LAHORE.

---

LIFE OF COLERIDGE.

LH 62-23
201

9
1

LIFE

OF

SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE

BY

HALL CAINE

---

LONDON

WALTER SCOTT

24 WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW

1887

NOTE.

THIS short biography has been compiled from many sources that cannot be mentioned here—table-talk, letters, diaries, memoirs, reminiscences, magazine articles, newspaper reports, and a few documents which have not hitherto been employed by any biographer of Coleridge. To two living Coleridgeans I must more particularly acknowledge my indebtedness—Mr. T. Ashe, and Mr. H. D. Traill. I have, however, been compelled to depart from these excellent authorities in my rendering of certain incidents of the first importance, and in my general reading of Coleridge's character as a man.

CONTENTS:

---

CHAPTER I.

Testimonies to Coleridge's greatness ; he is born October 21, 1772, at Ottery St. Mary, where his father is vicar and schoolmaster ; his mother's character ; leaves Ottery on his father's death, and is admitted to Christ's Hospital July, 1782 ; not happy at school ; has thoughts of becoming a shoemaker, and then of entering the medical profession ; is a solitary lad ; reads poetry and metaphysics ; is flogged for infidelity ; greatly influenced by Bowles' poetry ; begins to write himself ; leaves Christ's Hospital in the autumn of 1790 ; Charles Lamb, his schoolfellow, describes him as he then was . . . . .	PAGE II
--	------------

CHAPTER II.

Coleridge goes to Cambridge, February, 1791 ; talks much and is a democrat ; falls into debt ; runs away from Cambridge and enlists in Dragoons, December, 1793 ; is discharged, April, 1794 ; relations with his family much strained . . . . .	27
--	----

CHAPTER III.

Coleridge returns to Cambridge ; greatly impressed with Wordsworth's first book ; visits Oxford, and makes friends with Southey ; visits Bristol (1794) and falls in love with Sara
---	--

Fricker, to whose sister Southey is engaged ; literary society of Bristol ; Coleridge, Southey, and Allen project new social system, to be known as "Pantisocracy," and determine to go to America and establish it there ; meanwhile Coleridge stays in London in society of Lamb, and frequents "Salutation and Cat" ; is married October 4, 1795 ; Pantisocracy abandoned . . . . .	34
--	----

CHAPTER IV.

Married life at Clevedon ; Coleridge writes for the press ; projects Watchman ; first number appears March 1, 1796 ; his first volume of poems appears in April ; thinks of becoming a Unitarian minister ; Lamb's home sorrows ; Coleridge writes to him in his dark hour . . . . .	47
---	----

CHAPTER V.

Coleridge meets Wordsworth ; sketch of latter's early career ; description of Coleridge by Dorothy Wordsworth ; Coleridge and Wordsworth discuss poetry, and write "Lyrical Ballads" ; origin of "Ancient Mariner," autumn 1797 ; Coleridge writes "Ancient Mariner," "Dark Ladie," first part of "Christabel," "Osorio," "Three Graves," "Fears in Solitude," "France, an Ode" ; how "Kubla Khan" came to be written ; "Lyrical Ballads" published in 1798, and proves a failure ; temporary quarrel with Lamb . . . . .	59
---	----

CHAPTER VI.

Material position not prosperous in 1798 ; Coleridge thinks again of Unitarian pulpit ; makes acquaintance of Hazlitt at Shrewsbury ; Hazlitt describes him ; eloquence as a speaker ; the brothers Wedgwood give Coleridge £150 a year, and he goes to Germany with Wordsworth in summer of 1798 to learn German ; returns to England in June, 1799, and translates "Wallenstein" ; writes for Morning Post ; is offered share in Post and Courier , but declines ; goes in summer of 1800 to live at Greta Hall, near Keswick . . . . .	70
--	----