

A

HISTORY OF GREECE

I. Legendary Greece.

II. Grecian History to the Reign of Peisistratus at Athens.

BY

GEORGE GROTE, Esq.

VOL. II.

REPRINTED FROM THE SECOND LONDON EDITION.

NEW YORK:
HARPER & BROTHERS, PUBLISHERS,
329 AND 331 PEARL STREET.

CONTENTS.

VOL. II.

PART I.

CONTINUATION OF LEGENDARY GREECE.

CHAPTER XVIII.

CLOSING EVENTS OF LEGENDARY GREECE.—PERIOD OF INTERMEDIATE DARKNESS, BEFORE THE DAWN OF HISTORICAL GREECE.

SECTION I.—Return of the Heracleids into Peloponnésus.

Exile and low condition of the Heracleids.— Their reappearance as a powerful force along with the Dorians.— Mythical account of this alliance, as well as of the three tribes of Dorians.— Téménus, Kresphontés, and Aristodémus, invade Peloponnésus across the gulf of Corinth.— The prophet Karnus slain by Hippotés.— Oxylus chosen as guide.— Division of the lands of Peloponnésus among the invaders.— Explanatory value of these legendary events.— Mythical title of the Dorians to Peloponnésus.— Plato makes out a different title for the same purpose.— Other legends respecting the Achæans and Tisamenus.— Occupation of Argos, Sparta, and Messénia, by the Dorians.— Dorians at Corinth—Alétés.— Oxylus and the Ætolians at Elis.— Rights of the Eleians to superintend the Olympic games.— Family of Téménus and Kresphontés lowest in the series of subjects for the heroic drama.— Pretence of the historical Spartan kings to Achæan origin.— Emigrations from Peloponnésus consequent on the Dorian occupation.— Epeians, Pyleans, Achæans, Ionians.— Ionians in the north of Peloponnésus— not recognized by Homer.— Date assigned by Thucydidés to the return of the Heracleids. . . . . pages 1–14

SECTION II.—Migration of Thessalians and Boetians.

Thessalians move from Thesprôtis into Thessaly.— Non-Hellenic character of the Thessalians.— Boetians—their migration from Thessaly into Bœotia.— Discrepant legends about the Boetians.— Affinities between Bœotia and Thessaly.— Transition from mythical to historical Bœotia . . . . . 14–19

SECTION III. — Emigrations from Greece to Asia and the Islands of the Ægean.

1. Æolic Emigration.

Secession of the mythical races of Greece. — Æolic migration under the Pelopids ..... 19-21

2. Ionic Emigration.

Ionic emigration — branches off from the legendary history of Athens. — Thêsen and Menestheus. — Restoration of the sons of Thêseus to their father's kingdom. — They are displaced by the Neleids. — Melanthus and Kodrus. — Devotion and death of Kodrus. — No more kings at Athens. — Quarrel of the sons of Kodrus, and emigration of Neileus. — Different races who furnished the emigrants to Iônia ..... 21-25

3. Doric Emigrations.

Dorian colonies in Asia. — Thêra. — Legend of the Minyæ from Lemnos. — Minyæ in Triphylia. — Migrations of Dorians to Krete. — Story of Andrôn. — Althæmenês, founder of Rhodes. — Kôs, Knidus, and Karpatus ..... 25-31

Intervening blank between legend and history. — Difficulty of explaining that blank, on the hypothesis of continuous tradition. — Such an interval essentially connected with the genesis of legend ..... 31-34

CHAPTER XIX.

APPLICATION OF CHRONOLOGY TO GRECIAN LEGEND.

Different schemes of chronology proposed for the mythical events. — The data essential to chronological determination are here wanting. — Modern chronologists take up the same problem as ancient, but with a different canon of belief. — Mr. Clinton's opinion on the computations of the date of the Trojan war. — Value of the chronological computations depends on the trustworthiness of the genealogies. — Mr. Clinton's vindication of the genealogies — his proofs. — 1. Inscriptions — none of proved antiquity. — Genealogies — numerous, and of unascertainable date. — 2. Early poets. — Mr. Clinton's separation of the genealogical persons into real and fabulous: principles on which it is founded. — Remarks on his opinion. — His concessions are partial and inconsistent, yet sufficient to render the genealogies inapplicable for chronology. — Mr. Clinton's positions respecting historical evidence. — To what extent presumption may stand in favor of the early poets. — Plausible fiction satisfies the conditions laid down by Mr. Clinton — not distinguishable from truth without the aid of evidence. — Kadmus, Danaus, Hyllus, etc., all eponyms, and falling under Mr. Clinton's definition of fictitious persons. — What is real in the genealogies cannot be distinguished from what is fictitious. — At what time did the poets begin to produce continuous genealogies, from the mythical to the real world? — Evidence of mental progress when men methodize the past, even on fictitious principles. . . . . 34-57

CHAPTER XX.

STATE OF SOCIETY AND MANNERS AS EXHIBITED IN GRECIAN LEGEND.

Legendary poems of Greece valuable pictures of real manners, though giving no historical facts. — They are memorials of the first state of Grecian society — the starting-point of Grecian history. — Comparison of legendary with historical Greece — government of the latter — of the former. — The king — in legendary Greece. — His overruling personal ascendancy. — Difficulty which Aristotle found in explaining to himself the voluntary obedience paid to the early kings. — The boulé — the agora: their limited intervention and subordination to the king. — The agora — a medium for promulgation of the intentions of the king. — Agora summoned by Telemachus in Ithaca. — Agora in the second book of the Iliad — picture of submission which it presents. — Conduct of Odysseus to the people and the chiefs. — Justice administered in the agora by the king or chiefs. — Complaints made by Hesiod of unjust judgment in his own case. — The king among men is analogous to Zeus among gods. — The Council and Assembly, originally media through which the king acted, become, in historical Greece, the paramount depositaries of power. — Spartan kings an exception to the general rule — their limited powers. — Employment of public speaking as an engine of government — coeval with the earliest times. — Its effects in stimulating intellectual development. — Moral and social feeling in legendary Greece. — Omnipotence of personal feeling towards the gods, the king, or individuals. — Effect of special ceremonies. — Contrast with the feelings in historical Athens. — Force of the family tie. — Marriage — respect paid to the wife. — Brothers, and kinsmen. — Hospitality. — Reception of the stranger and the suppliant. — Personal sympathies the earliest form of sociality. — Ferocious and aggressive passions unrestrained. — Picture given by Hesiod still darker. — Contrast between heroic and historical Greece. — Orphans. — Mutilation of dead bodies. — Mode of dealing with homicide. — Appeased by valuable compensation (ποινή) to the kinsman of the murdered man. — Punished in historical Greece as a crime against society. — Condition, occupations, and professions of the Homeric Greeks. — Slaves. — Thêtes. — Limited commerce and navigation of the Homeric Greeks. — Kretans, Taphians, Phœnicians. — Nature of Phœnician trade as indicated by Homer. — Weapons and mode of fighting of the Homeric Greeks. — Contrast with the military array of historical Greece. — Analogous change — in military array and in civil society. — Fortification of towns. — Earliest residences of the Greeks — hill-villages lofty and difficult of access. — Homeric society recognizes walled towns, individual