CHAPTER I.

The state of the question ; with a summary of the reasons for which, amongst men of different religions, one side only can be saved	53
---	----

ANSWER I.

Shewing, that the adversary grants the former question, and proposeth a new one ; and that there is no reason why, among men of different opinions and communions, one side only can be saved	59
---	----

CHAPTER II.

What is that means whereby the revealed truths of God are conveyed to our understanding, and which must determine controversies in faith and religion	72
---	----

ANSWER II.

Concerning the means whereby the revealed truths of God are conveyed to our understanding, and which must determine controversies in faith and religion	90
---	----

CHAPTER III.

That the distinction of points fundamental and not fundamental is neither pertinent nor true in our present controversy ; and that the Catholic visible Church cannot err in either kind of the said points	157
---	-----

ANSWER III.

Wherein it is maintained, that the distinction of points fundamental and not fundamental is in this present controversy good and pertinent ; and that the catholic church may err in the latter kind of the said points	174

CHAPTER IV.

PAGE

To say that the Creed contains all points necessarily to be believed, is neither pertinent to the question in hand, nor in itself true 229

ANSWER IV.

Wherein is shewed that the Creed contains all necessary points of mere belief 245

CHAPTER V.

That Luther, Calvin, their associates, and all who began or continue the separation from the external communion of the Roman Church, are guilty of the proper and formal sin of schism 290

ANSWER V.

The separation of Protestants from the Roman Church, being upon just and necessary causes, is not any way guilty of schism 328

CHAPTER VI.

That Luther and the rest of Protestants have added heresy unto schism 389

ANSWER VI.

That Protestants are not heretics 412

CHAPTER VII.

In regard of the precept of charity towards one's self, Protestants are in a state of sin as long as they remain separated from the Roman Church 470

ANSWER VII.

That Protestants are not bound by the charity which they owe to themselves to re-unite themselves to the Roman Church . . . 479

The Conclusion 501
