NAPOLEON WATCHING THE FIRE OF MOSCOW.

After the victory of Borodino, Napoleon entered Moscow on September 14th, 1812, and took up his residence in the Kremlin. From the first day of his occupation fire broke out in different quarters, and three days later the city was in flames. The Kremlin was surrounded by fire, its windows burst with the heat, and it was only with great difficulty that Napoleon's own quarters were preserved.
