WORKS BY THE AUTHOR,

AND SOLD BY W. WHITE AND CO.

MODERN ACCOMPLISHMENTS, or the MARCH
OF INTELLECT. Eighth Thousand, price 7s.

“ We have been highly pleased with this volume, and deeply affected by some parts of it ; and we should think, if extensively read, that it is adapted to be extremely useful.”—Christian Instructor.

“ In this work Miss Sinclair has not taken a single position which she has not made good. We think she bids fair to continue the line of first-class female writers upon female manners and morals.”—The Constitution Newspaper.

“ We admire the high tone of moral courage which Miss Sinclair has displayed in attacking glaring absurdities, which are deeply injurious in their effects, and are often more easily checked by being thus held up to general observation and to ridicule, than by bitter personalities, or by a graver style of rebuke.”—Inverness Journal.

MODERN SOCIETY, or the MARCH of INTELLECT, the conclusion of MODERN ACCOMPLISHMENTS. Seventh Thousand, price 7s.

“ Some of the after-dinner conversations remind us strongly of the sparkling and vivid wit of Sheridan. The passages to which we allude are full of talent and the nicest tact ; and they prove that the authoress possesses a fund of wit and humour of a highly refined order.”—Edinburgh Evening Post.

“ The dialogue is sustained with remarkable vigour and spirit, and gives eminent proof of a mind not only well regulated, but highly cultivated.”—Scottish Guardian.

HILL and VALLEY, or WALES and the WELSH.
Third Thousand, price 10s.

“ Miss Sinclair has already proved herself to be a lady of high talent and richly cultivated mind. She thinks with precision and with vigour ; and she possesses the quality of seizing the objects of her thoughts in the right place, and at the proper time, and of presenting them to the mind's eye of her readers in the most clear and captivating light. Her style is characteristic of her mind—transparent, piquant, and lively.”—Edinburgh Christian Instructor.

“ The whole bespeaks a healthy, fertile, and polished intellect.”—Saturday Evening Post.

“ Miss Sinclair has now ably earned a literary reputation, not merely as an agreeable, but a useful writer.”—Scottish Guardian.

SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTCH, or the WESTERN
CIRCUIT. PART FIRST. Third Thousand, price 8s.

"We cordially recommend Miss Sinclair's volume as one of the very best that have proceeded from her elegant and industrious pen. For ourselves, we made her tour of the Western Highlands at a single sitting, and hope that 'the next time that she rides a race, we may be there to see.'"—Scottish Guardian.

SHETLAND AND THE SHETLANDERS, or the NORTHERN CIRCUIT. With a Map of the Route.
PART SECOND. Second Thousand, price 9s.

"Miss Sinclair's style is refreshingly light, easy, rambling, and gossiping. The volume is one remarkably well suited for summer reading; it is worth five times all the Annuals ever published."—John o' Groat Journal.

"In the present work we are presented with the same graphic descriptions of character, scenery, and curiosities, the same anecdotal varieties—all conveyed in the same animated style, which, in the former volume, called forth our hearty praise."—Saturday Evening Post.

For Young People.

HOLIDAY HOUSE, a Series of Tales. Third Thousand, price 5s. 6d.

"We find in this volume, as in all Miss Sinclair's other productions, the same lively intellect, the same buoyant good humour, the same easy and vigorous style, the same happy talent for observation and description, the same warfare against the fashionable follies of the day, and the same assiduity in inculcating the lessons of morality and religion. We may venture to predict that Holiday House will be a standard gift-book with juvenile friends."—Edinburgh Advertiser.

CHARLIE SEYMOUR, in 18mo, Second Edition, Enlarged, with a coloured Frontispiece, price 3s.

THE NURSERY PLUTARCH, with Engravings and Cuts, price 2s. 6d.

THIS volume was revised and corrected by a venerated parent, now no more. His opinion was as much against books being published without the author's name as against anonymous letters, and he frequently expressed his desire, which was repeated in his last sickness, that none of his family should ever publish anonymously. It is in compliance with his injunction that the author has ventured to acknowledge her work, and to prefix to these pages a name, which must have been entirely insignificant and unknown but for its connexion with her distinguished and lamented father, SIR JOHN SINCLAIR.

PREFACE.

VARIOUS editions of this work, both in England and America, having been rapidly sold off within a very short period, the authoress trusts she does not presume too much on public favour by producing another; and having carefully revised and corrected it, she takes this opportunity to announce, that, in compliance with very frequent suggestions, she has brought forward a concluding volume, which may be read either separately or in connexion with the present story.

An opinion having been occasionally entertained that the characters sustained in this narrative were not always fictitious, the author feels it necessary to say, that no inducement could have justified, in her own estimation, the drawing of a single portrait. Where accidental coincidences of name occur, they would have been carefully avoided, had any thing personal been contemplated, and whatever resemblances have been imagined must result entirely from accident, her sole aim having been to represent classes of persons, whose trifling errors might, she hoped, be made obvious to themselves, under the disguise of an imaginary narrative, and thus Christians may be led more circumspectly to watch, as those who
