7th-23d), — with an Eye on Dresden as the crowning one, p. 202.

Austrian-Reichs Army does its crowning Feat (August 26th—September 4th): Diary of what is called the "Siege" of Dresden, 209.

VI. PRINCE HENRI MAKES A MARCH OF FIFTY HOURS;
THE RUSSIANS CANNOT FIND LODGING IN
SILESIA 230

Daun, Soltikof and Company again have a Colloquy (Bautzen, September 15th): after which Everybody starts on his special Course of Action, p. 237.

Four Letters of Friedrich's (10th-24th September), 240.

Friedrich manages (September 24th — October 24th) to get the Russians sent home; and Himself falls lamed with Gout, 250.

VII. FRIEDRICH REAPPEARS ON THE FIELD, AND IN SEVEN DAYS AFTER COMES THE CATASTROPHE OF MAXEN 267

VIII. MISCELLANEA IN WINTER-QUARTERS, 1759-60 . . 284

Serene Highness of Würtemberg, at Fulda (November 30th, 1759), is just about "firing Victoria," and giving a Ball to Beauty and Fashion, in Honour of a certain Event; — but is unpleasantly interrupted, p. 286.

What is Perpetual President Maupertuis doing all this While? Is he still in Berlin; or where in the Universe is he? Alas, poor Maupertuis! 290.

Grand French Invasion-Scheme comes entirely to Wreck (Quiberon Bay, 20th November 1759): of Controller-General Silhouette, and the Outlooks of France, financial and other, 293.

Friedrich, strange to say, publishes (March—June 1760) an Edition of his Poems. Question, "Who wrote Matinées du Roi de Prusse?" — for the second, and positively the last Time, 300.
