RE-NARRATED

BY

HENRY KINGSLEY, F.R.G.S.

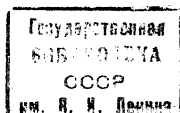

Third Edition.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

*The bodies and the bones of those
That strove in other days to pass,
Are withered in the thorny close,
Or scattered blanching on the grass.
He gazes on the silent dead:
"They perished in their daring deeds."
This proverb flashes through his head,
"The many fail: the one succeeds."*
