'Mr. Proctor, of all writers of our time, best conforms to Matthew Arnold's conception of a man of culture, in that he strives to humanize knowledge and divest it of whatever is harsh, crude, or technical, and so makes it a source of happiness and brightness for all.'—WESTMINSTER REVIEW.

THE ESSAYS in the present volume are taken chiefly from the Times, Scribner's Magazine, the Gentleman's Magazine, Belgravia, the Contemporary Review, and the Cornhill. I have little to say of them that I have not already said of other essays of mine which have been republished in book form. My object in writing them has been to give clear and simple but also correct accounts of scientific matters likely to be interesting to the general public.
