LESSON I.

THE SENTENCE.

When we wish to make known our thoughts we use language.

We may make motions that express our thoughts. This is the language of gesture. People that are deaf and dumb use the language of gesture.

With our mouths we may make sounds, that express our thoughts. The sounds are united to make words, and the words are put together to form spoken language.

Again, certain marks called letters may stand for the sounds used in spoken language, and these letters may be arranged to form words. These words, when properly joined, form written language.

In making known our thoughts, words, whether spoken or written, are put together in groups called sentences.

The sentences of spoken and written language are used for only three purposes.
